

LITERATURE

Department website: <https://www.sps.northwestern.edu/masters/literature/>

Through advanced literary study, students grapple with the thought and creative vision of the world's most remarkable minds: rediscover and master classic texts while exploring exciting, contemporary works, diverse genres, and cutting-edge ideas in narrative form and interpretation. This broad and stimulating intellectual challenge improves the ability to analyze complex information, challenge assumptions, weigh competing considerations and reach effective conclusions. Graduates of the MALit program are well prepared for application to PhD programs and for success in diverse professional areas from advertising to law. Secondary-school teachers develop a competitive edge by deepening their subject-area knowledge — a key distinction between the MALit program and more general graduate programs in education.

Students must complete nine courses to complete their Master of Arts in Literature degree. Students must complete two core courses, including the capstone project and seven elective courses. Students can take elective courses that cover such topics as comparative literary studies, English, French and Italian, Slavic languages and literatures, and theatre. There are five specializations: American Literature (<https://catalogs.northwestern.edu/sps/graduate/literature/literature-ma-american-specialization/>), British Literature (<https://catalogs.northwestern.edu/sps/graduate/literature/literature-ma-british-specialization/>), Comparative and World Literature (<https://catalogs.northwestern.edu/sps/graduate/literature/literature-ma-comparative-world-specialization/>), Interdisciplinary Studies (<https://catalogs.northwestern.edu/sps/graduate/literature/literature-ma-interdisciplinary-studies-specialization/>), and Film, Literature and Visual Culture (<https://catalogs.northwestern.edu/sps/graduate/literature/literature-ma-film-visual-culture-specialization/>).
